

New Policy Expands SNAP (food stamps)

For low-income community college students

As of March 2018, a new rule is in place that will help most low-income community college students become eligible for SNAP (food stamps). Under the new policy up to 25,000 community college students who were previously ineligible should now qualify, giving them access to fresh, healthy foods. To learn more, visit www.clsphila.org/collegefoodstamps.