

...municipal and senior district coverage, news stories and features highlighting people and places from Bristol to Quakertown; Riegelsville, Tinicum, New Hope, Langhorne and everywhere in between.

As the next president of UBCC, the region's premiere business organization, Wingert will oversee staff, growth, retention and outreach of the Chamber and its mission to serve its membership

"I know of few organizations that care as much about its members as UBCC does," Wingert said. He was on the committee that hired Danielle Bodnar, UBCC's new executive director. Bodnar replaced Tara King, who retired in October, after nearly 20 years of service to UBCC.

"When we were looking for a new executive director, there were three [top] qualities we idenand marketing experience. Danielle stood well above the other applicants," Wingert said.

Wingert served on the directory committee, whose oversight brought the annual membership directory and community profile in-house in 2016. The 2019 directory edition will release in January.

Wingert holds a bachelor's degree in international studies from American University.

JOSEPH G. "JOE" WINGERT

Lowe's Heroes renovate Bucks Opportunity Council's new building

Lowe's Heroes from Warrington volunteered their time and skills to help renovate the Bucks County Opportunity Council's (BCOC) new location in Bristol Township.

Renovations included painting the interior of the first and second floors of BCOC's new location at 721 Veterans Highway, using paint and supplies donated by the Warrington Lowe's.

The Lowe's Heroes program began more than 10 years ago as a project that would allow Lowe's employees to make a difference in their community. Every year, each Lowe's location chooses a local nonprofit organization or K-12 public school to help renovate. Throughout the United States, Lowe's Heroes have devoted thousands of hours to improving their communities.

"We greatly appreciate the staff at Lowe's Warrington for all the hard work they put into improving our new building," said Joe Cuozzo, director of development at the Bucks County Opportunity Council. "The paint and paint supplies make a huge difference in all the rooms and saves us from having to pay professionals to do the job. It really makes a difference..."

Some of the Lowe's Warrington employees who painted the Opportunity Council building are, from left, Kerry Savrin, Joe Stanton, Aaron Drellich (store manager), Wayne Haynes and Linda Pfeifer.

The new Bristol location will help the Bucks County Opportunity Council expand its services for low-income families in Lower Bucks County. In addition to emergency housing services and income tax preparation during tax season, the Opportunity Council will offer a recharge center for any individuals or families needing assistance including outlets to charge electronics, a shower, bathroom facilities and a washer and dryer for clothes.

BCOC is the leading anti-poverty nonprofit organization in Bucks County and the designated Community Action Agency for the county of Bucks. Last year, BCOC served over 11,000 Bucks County residents in need of housing, food, tax return preparation, heating and cooling services and emergency services. For information on BCOC, visit bcoc.org or call 215-345-8175. For information on the Lowe's Heroes, visit jobs.lowes.com/lowes-heroes-employee-volunteers.

orthy

President Steven Fangmann, of the Year Award from the Clean Water Works Association

tristate, including in Treviso. Award for designing and building AOP system for the treatment of 1,4-dioxane in drinking water. 1,4-dioxane which is used as a plastic additive, can cause damage to the liver and kidneys, and is a recognized municipal Law practice groups. He will work out of the firm's Doylestown office.

Award from New York Section of the Water Works Association are, from left, Allan Trojan UV (equipment used in the treatment of 1,4-dioxane in drinking water) and Cinar Akman, GA (attentive for Trojan UV).

Between 2015 and 2018, Eastburn served as an assistant district attorney for the Bucks County District Attorney's Office.

He served as chief of the Accelerated Rehabilitative Disposition ("ARD") program, which diverts first-time, nonviolent offenders from the criminal justice system. He was also a member of the Economic Crimes Unit, where he specialized in prosecuting white collar crime.

Eastburn is a grandchild third removed from the founder of Eastburn and Gray, Hugh B. Eastburn. His father, D. Rodman ("Rod") Eastburn, is the firm's president and chief operating officer.

Eastburn earned his J.D. from St. John's University School of Law in New York and his B.A. in Economics from Fairfield

ShopRite of Warminster owner and operator Joe Cowhey is recognized by the Warminster Township Board of Supervisors for helping township police obtain a new K-9 dog.